

David F. Overton
Curriculum Vitae
dfoverto@nps.edu

Education

M.S., Information Technology at Naval Postgraduate School, 2003
Thesis: Selection of a Conceptual Framework for Enterprise Information Integration (EII) in a Multiple Level Security Environment (Electromagnetic Space Analysis Center)

B.S., Information Technology, East Carolina University, Greenville, NC 1995

Summary of Experience

Teaching/Research –

2007 – Present; Associate Professor, Joint Maritime Operations, Naval War College
2004 – Present; Adjunct Faculty, Marine Corps Command and Staff College (JPME-I) courses
2004 – 2007; Military Faculty, Graduate School of Ops & Info Sciences, Naval Postgraduate School

Courses Taught –

Joint Maritime Operations (Naval War College, Monterey Program)
Small Wars (Marine Corps University, Monterey Program)
Marine Corps Expeditionary Operations (Marine Corps University, Monterey Program)
Marine Corps Amphibious Operations (Marine Corps University, Monterey Program)
Marine Corps Planning Process (Marine Corps University, Monterey Program)
Decision Support Systems (Naval Postgraduate School)

Other –

Career officer with the U.S. Marine Corps (detailed résumé enclosed)

Publications

Article – “The Main Battery,” with Gary J. Ohls, First Responder Magazine, November 2009
(Issued in conjunction with the commissioning of the USS New York/LPD-17).

Presentations and Panels

Presented a paper on EA-6B Prowler tactics used during Operation Allied Force at the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, California, October 2000.

References

John F. Hemlaben, PhD.
Dean of Academics, Marine Corps College of Distance Education and Training
Marine Corps University
2300A Louis Rd.
Building 2300A
MCB Quantico, VA 22134-5118

Dan C. Boger, PhD.
Chairman, Department of Information Science
Naval Postgraduate School
1 University Circle
Glasgow Hall GW-3005
Monterey, California 93943

Professional Affiliations

Navy League of the United States